

NATURAL JUSTICE?

Just as we can say that sympathetic resonance is the beginning of Love and Compassion in the physical world, we might also say that there are physical principles which are the beginnings of a kind of natural justice, as a way of fair and equitable distribution, not merely of resources, but more importantly, of living space and creative life potential. Three key features of natural justice we already see present in the environment generally are the freedoms of movement, a place to be, and equitable, non-centralized, distribution. These three freedoms taken together might be seen as a species' basic rights, for without them, it is impossible for the natural intelligence of adaptation to work.
