

(Photo: Cushion Pinks at 2700 meters, the Alps)

Timberline

: the point at which the alpine forest gradually gives way to snow and cold,

a tree grows about as fast as water wears down a rock, and a year's growth is measured by the width of a whisper.